Dear Mr. Dulles:

I am writing this letter to thank you very much for your courteous reply to my letter pertaining to communism.

Your letter was verbally read to the students, placed on display, and it will then be put into the permanent files. Your enclosure is now on the reserve shelf in the library as an assignment for all students in the senior class to read.

I wish it were possible for me to express to you my violent hatred of the communist program. I still feel limited in getting the message across to the people. I never fail to make some daily point on red treachery to the students. I have continued the fight into my work as a military intelligence officer(reserve), and write articles on the subject for magazines. There is almost a daily flow of letters from my pen requesting information from world leaders about the subject of communism. Can one do any more ?

Thank you again for your kindness and I hope that we have the pleasure to correspond again sometime.

Very truly yours,

Donald G. Brownlow
